

Team building activities

- developing high performance teams

Formed in 1946, Roffey Park is an internationally renowned leadership institute, based in the UK and Singapore. We deliver powerful, transformational learning in leadership and management development, organisational development and human resources.

Without question, the greatest asset in any organisation is its people and their ability to collaborate in achieving strategic goals and objectives. We believe that creating the opportunity for each individual to perform to their full potential will improve business performance – and make work more fulfilling. Building high performance teams requires individuals to have self-awareness and knowledge of their different behaviours and to develop more open and empowered ways of working.

We offer a range of services to help you develop effective teams, ranging from facilitated team development workshops through to a range of half-day team building activities.

Our venue in West Sussex is a contemporary conference space which is designed to be conducive to learning and lends itself perfectly to team building activities. Set in 40 acres, our venue provides a welcome contrast to the frenetic workplace enabling teams to work together, learn together and simply have fun together.

Cerebral

From crystal maze style challenges through to problem solving and F1 challenge, these activities challenge the mind and create a competitive environment in which all participants will flourish. Whether it is indoor or outdoor, our venue has a range of spaces that can be adapted to suit the activity.

The Crystal Challenge

Combining physical and mental team challenges from our list of head-to-head activities, each team is awarded crystals for completing each challenge. Each crystal collected can either be converted into points or could earn the team time inside the crystal dome at the end of the event. Ideal for both indoors or out and can be tailored to suit your exact requirements.

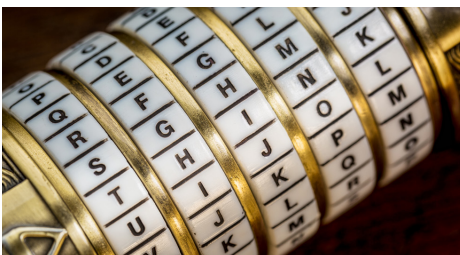

Around the World GPS Challenge

Using GPS technology we have taken the traditional treasure hunt concept and combined it with some mind blowing, innovative technology to create a number of fun, engaging, interactive challenges. Encouraging teamwork, this unique and interactive indoor event challenges you to work your way around the globe - without ever leaving the room!

24 – The clock is ticking

The clock is ticking! Your team must work together to solve problems, crack codes and de-fuse the ticking time bomb. Teams are split into 'operatives' and 'field agents'. The operatives have to crack codes and then send their agents out and about to retrieve the information needed to complete the final challenge. An outdoor activity to pit team minds against the clock.

The DaVinci Chimes

Working with a collection of mysterious items, a pile of wooden artefacts and a set of what appear to be chimes; using only old journals, you and your team are in a race against time to unravel the mystery. Do you think your team are up for this? An indoor or outdoor challenge.

Team Apprentice

Will you be hired or fired? Reflecting the TV show – The Apprentice – this activity uses some of the key elements to make a great team building event. The scene is set as ‘Sir Alec’ enters the room and gives the opening brief. The challenge begins! Following each of the tasks the teams will go in front of our board of judges who will decide which team is hired, and which teams are fired.

F1 Challenge

This challenge requires teams to construct a kit car. Working from a set of construction plans, each team has use their collective skills to turn a ‘flat-pack’ kit of materials into a cardboard driving machine. Once construction is complete, the teams present their cars with brand advertising, corporate messages and company values. The challenge concludes with a head to head racing grand prix!

Team Puzzles

Team puzzles are great for getting teams to work together. With a selection of mind bending activities, instructors will be on hand to supervise and collect scores. These activities can also be incorporated between sessions to energise your staff through your event, indoors or outdoors to suit the weather.

The challenges were interactive and made you think, but most of all they were fun. The team were extremely friendly and worked extremely hard making sure everything was well timed and organised, and had fun with it too. Thank you very much for all of your hard work.

Environmental

With 40 acres of grounds and access to St Leonards Forest, an area of outstanding natural beauty, our venue is perfect for environmental and woodland craft team building activities which enable participants to combine traditional skills with a competitive element.

Fire on Earth

Participants will learn how to make fire without artificial aid and use the fire to feed and water themselves and their team.

Bow and Arrow Making

Participants will be taken back in time to learn how to make a bow and develop skills to shoot their arrow to help their team and themselves.

Orienteering

After a short talk in orientation (which can be natural navigation) teams will be given their destination and they need to beat the clock to get there before the other team(s).

Spiders Web

Participants will attempt to get through a range of giant spider webs, using a range of individual and team skills.

The afternoon activity with Woods For Learning (Marlow Sports) went down really well with the group, despite some of their initial reservations around the possibility of getting wet and muddy if the weather was not in our favour. The team worked well together and learnt some new skills and bonded. I would definitely recommend Woods For Learning (Marlow Sports) to others.

Wine

Team building activities partnered with a selection of hand-picked wines offer something different and are ideally suited for an evening activity. The events can be tailored to your needs and, combined with dinner and a comfortable bedroom, provide valuable opportunities for your team to get to know each other better.

Whose Wine is it Anyway? The Wine Lies Challenge

Our most popular wine game has small teams pitting themselves against each other to decide which of three descriptions matches the wine they are tasting. Which members of the team are telling little white lies? Group size 20+.

Global Wine Exploration

On tables set out with wines from around the world, we will help you explore some very exotic and delicious wines, completely off the beaten track. Everyone gets a tasting card and a chance to take notes about the wine.

Last One Standing

A game that lots of people can take part in. Everyone tastes a wine and then stands up. Statements are read out about the wine - true or false? Get it wrong and you sit down. The theory is that we finish up with one winner. Then on to the next wine. This game can be played individually or in teams. For larger groups sizes 60+.

Heads & Tails

Based upon the game for guest involvement with hands above their head or behind their back depending on how the coin is flipped – our alternative version, mixes the concept with tasting a different wine per round, until we have a final winner. Heads = tasting a red wine, tails = tasting a white wine. The game can cater for any number of guests.

Was good to taste different wines from different regions. Really enjoyed the evening. Very different to any other events I've been to before. Head4Therapy

Excellent fun and got everyone involved and happy. Northair
